

What joy, to be of Human Birth

Daniel Böttger

Martin Böttger

What joy, to be of human birth! We've made this world our home more deep-ly than all life on Earth that we al-low to roam. Our hu-man rights and peace al-low us time to sing this tune and gave us where we're sing-ing now and foot-prints on the Moon! And there-fo-re on-ly we a-mong all life on Earth should ask: what led us when we grew so rich we take our world to task?

As apes in ancient Africa, where lions ruled the day, we worked in teams, a radical and new and human way!
Our drive to work together leads from families and tribes through cities, nation states and creeds to global human rights!
If that's the nature of our kind, if such a drive is real, will it be there for us to find within if we just feel?

Of course it's there! We call it love!
Is is the human urge to work with those we're allies of, that's let all this emerge.
The love that guides humanity is not place to stay and there's no way to make it be.
Love is itself the way!
The love that guides humanity is just an instinct, yet it led to all we now here see.
Where else will we be led?